

Planner Rachelle Bradley joins SCJ Alliance

SPOKANE, WASH., September 8, 2021 – Rachelle Bradley has joined SCJ Alliance as a Planner in the Spokane office.

After earning her Bachelor of Arts in English Literature from Western Washington University, Rachelle returned to her native home of Spokane and worked for the Spokane Tribe of Indians as a Grant Writer and Assistant Planner. As her duties evolved, she realized planning was what she'd been looking for.

“Community service has always been important to me and I’m a people person,” she shared, reflecting on the good career fit. Then, for three years, Rachelle served the Tribe as a Transportation Planner. “Really, I worked on all things infrastructure and did a lot of project management.” While working for the Tribe, Rachelle went back to school to get a dual master’s degree from Eastern Washington University in Urban & Regional Planning and Public Administration.

A 100% employee-owned firm, SCJ has over 130 employees and specializes in civil engineering, transportation planning and design, environmental and urban planning, landscape architecture, and public outreach. The firm has earned many awards for project work and being a great place to work. In addition to their Spokane office, SCJ has 10 other offices across Washington, Montana, and Colorado.
